A Guide for Staff
Supporting Students in Urgent Situations
This guide will help you to respond to students who:

- Are thinking about suicide or acting on suicidal thoughts
- Are experiencing psychosis (experiencing / believing things that others do not)
- Are at immediate risk of serious harm (e.g. overdose, self-harm, risk of harm from someone else)
- Tell you about someone else who is at immediate risk of serious harm
- Have recently experienced sexual violence
- Have recently experienced other types of violence

This guide will also help you signpost students to specialist support in less immediately urgent situations e.g.

- They have no money
- They have nowhere to live
- They are anxious, distressed or upset
- They need emotional, psychological or mental health support
- They (or others e.g. younger siblings) are at risk of harm from someone else e.g. family
- They have pressing welfare, practical and personal issues
What to do - Immediately Urgent Situations

It is urgent if:

- They need urgent medical attention
- They are actively/immediately at risk of suicide/serious self-harm
- They seem so acutely unwell that they are at serious risk of harm to themselves or someone else - including situations where they appear to perceive things differently from those around them e.g. delusions, hallucinations

Action:

- Take them to a quiet and safe place if possible
- Get help from someone else – it is safer not to manage this situation alone. Queen Mary Mental Health First Aiders can help: https://bit.ly/2N1wy9r.
- Make a note of the student’s name, mobile number and student number if possible

Call 999 for an ambulance (with or without the student’s consent) and contact Queen Mary Security on 3333 – they will coordinate ambulance access onto campus.

The emergency services will advise you if they feel the Police should attend rather than an ambulance.

In some situations, you can call the Tower Hamlets 24 hour mental health crisis line instead – see Support and Resources.

Someone else is at immediate risk of serious harm e.g. a friend or family member of the person telling you.

The person telling you should call 999 and explain the situation, as they know the most about it.

You can help by finding them a safe space to make the call, and offering them support during and after the call.
Follow Up - Immediately Urgent Situations

How you follow up is almost as important as how you manage the crisis. It is important that students get appropriate support in the aftermath of a crisis.

- Email dds@qmul.ac.uk a record of: what happened, who else was involved and the student’s name and contact details as soon as possible. The mental health team within DDS will liaise with emergency services, A and E and other relevant agencies, and will contact the student to offer support.

- Talk to your line manager and relevant colleagues about what happened and any necessary further actions.

- Liaise with the mental health team within DDS for advice and support about any next steps your School or department might need to take.
Other Urgent Situations

Sexual violence

- Listen, and show that you are listening, even if it is difficult for you to hear
- Don’t ask questions about what has happened
- Believe what they are saying and tell them that you believe them
- Enable them to stay in control about what happens next - resist any temptation to take over e.g. by arranging and doing things you think are best
- www.reportandsupport.qmul.ac.uk has detailed information about support and options – go through this together so that they can decide what they want to do
- Give them the information in writing, as they are unlikely to remember otherwise

A child under 18, or a vulnerable adult, is at risk of harm

A student may tell you about a harmful situation at home, where there is a child under 18 e.g. their sibling. Alternatively, someone might tell you about a vulnerable adult (e.g. a disabled student) who is at risk of serious harm (e.g., there is domestic violence at home).

Queen Mary has a duty to act on safeguarding issues like these. There are designated staff at QMUL for you to tell, who will decide what to do next. See: www.arcs.qmul.ac.uk/policy/safeguarding/
What to do - Less Immediately Urgent Situations

Examples:

- Nowhere to live
- Pressing financial, welfare, practical and personal issues
- Experiencing Domestic Violence
- At risk of forced marriage
- Anxious, distressed or upset
- Needs emotional, psychological or mental health support

What to do

- Help them to form (and ideally write down) a plan for getting support, so that they have a reminder about what you have talked about later on. Give them written information about the services they can contact – they are unlikely to remember otherwise
- Consider whether you are going to have contact with them again – this will depend on your role. Agree how / when you will next have contact, as appropriate
- If a student tells you that they have a long-term medical condition, a disability, a specific learning difference like dyslexia or a mental health diagnosis (e.g. depression, anxiety) then you should refer them to DDS. DDS offer a Policy for staff receiving a mental health diagnoses from students: rb.gy/5f8s6p
Tips for Listening

Tips:

- Be clear that you are here to help – students often assume staff are acting in a disciplinary role.
- This guide helps you to manage an initial crisis or urgent situation safely so that students can get professional help – you are not expected to be a counsellor.
- Look after yourself - Queen Mary has training and support available: http://connected.qmul.ac.uk/our-students/student-support
- Staff counselling: 0800 243458 (24hrs, 365 days) www.workplaceoptions.co.uk

Open questions

- How? What?
- Where? Who?

React

- ‘That sounds stressful…’ You don’t have to be completely neutral - it helps to show you understand.

Summarise

- ‘So you’re feeling stressed about your exams…’ Shows you’ve listened and understood.

Short words of encouragement

- ‘Yes’, ‘Go on…’

Reflect

- Reflecting back words or phrases can encourage people to go on/expand.

Clarify

- ‘Tell me more about…’ Avoids glossing over important points.
